This video covers one of the most overlooked stories of the Second World War: Hungary. A country that fought beside Germany, was pulled deeper and deeper into the disaster of the Eastern Front, and paid an enormous price by the end.

I wanted to give this topic the time it deserves, because Hungary's role in the war is often reduced to a footnote, even though its soldiers, civilians, and cities suffered heavily as the conflict turned against the Axis. If you enjoy the video, leaving a like or comment genuinely helps YouTube push it out to more people. Thank you all for watching. #documentary #history #military #education

My father and uncle were on the Don with the 2nd. Then all the way back. Uncle was killed late '44 in Pest and dad was at castle hill from the Citadella to the palace to the final breakout. I have his signum laudis and fire cross

The alliance with the Germans was not just because of the fear of another red terror but also because Hitler deliberately helped the Hungarian government to take back some of the original Hungarian territories lost after the First World War (Treaty of Versailles or as us Hungarians call it: Trianon). I'd argue that this was even a nt motivation.

The genesis wasn't even bela kun but trianon. Hungary would have never joined if transylvania wasn't carved up. Missing some vital info here

Just because the war was lost doesn't mean all was in vain.There is victory and loss in all wars but men still fight,fight for what they believe is right.And history preserves them for generations to come.

14:58 There was some resistance from Lt. László Lonkay's unit of the 16th Border Jäger Battalion in Újvidék (Novi Sad today) and the royal bodyguard unit in Buda Castle held out longer, than the country of Denmark.

Fighting in the winter on the eastern front in those conditions sounds like a level of hell unimaginable. Rest in power to those brave men.
